

2026 ADLM Capital Section Trainee Award
Application Deadline Friday, June 5th, 2026

The ADLM Capital Section is sponsoring one $1000 trainee award for work presented at the 2026 ADLM Annual Scientific Meeting. The award is intended to support the professional development of trainees, including registration fees, travel costs, professional society membership fees, scientific books and electronic resources, and other similar costs.

The following eligibility criteria will apply:

- The applicant is a member of the ADLM Capital Local Section.
- The applicant has a poster or podium presentation accepted for the 2026 ADLM Annual Meeting.

Posters and presentations abstracts will be judged based on the following categories:

Background

- The rationale for the study is clearly stated.
- Sufficient background information is provided to support the rationale.

Methods

- The methods chosen and applied are appropriate for the research.
- The method section is comprehensive, and the methods are clearly explained.

Results

- The results are clearly stated with supporting statistical analysis.

Conclusions

- The conclusions are supported by the results.
- The conclusions include the future direction of the research, or provide recommendations to improve practice.

To Apply:

Submit your name, institution, and accepted abstract via email to Caroline Nottingham at cnottingham@werfen.com.