

Counsel's Risk Radar

Class action risk is no longer a local legal issue — it's a global business risk

Read the full article for key takeaways from DLA Piper's 2026 Global Class Action Summit.

AI-driven exposure

AI is creating new risk categories — and is also being used to identify and accelerate claims.

Globalized claims

Class actions are expanding across jurisdictions, with claimant strategies moving quickly from one market to another.

Environmental and product claims

Sustainability, product liability, and regulatory scrutiny are creating new pathways for collective litigation.

Cross-border defense readiness

In-house teams need early visibility into who is driving claims, how issues are spreading, and where coordinated defense is needed.

Litigation funding

Third-party funders are scaling collective claims through coordinated, cross-border portfolios.
