

MILLENNIALS AND MEETINGS: THE FUTURE OF COLLABORATION

Millennials may be new to the modern work environment, but their fresh perspective is raising the bar on productivity. Familiar with technology and fed up with tradition, they're shaping the future of collaboration by reimagining its oldest practice – the meeting.

Millennials	Gen Xers	Boomers
35%	33%	25%

Millennials are now the largest generation in the U.S. workforce at 35%, higher than both Generation Xers (33%) and baby boomers (25%).

Millennials want meetings to have a purpose

If there's no good reason to meet, most millennials say why bother. But that doesn't mean they hate meetings.

51% of millennials prefer to communicate face to face, compared to 19% for email and 14% for texting.

Too many meetings just lack focus. Millennials say their meetings should have:

Strong leadership

Short agendas

Smaller sizes

Creative spaces

Millennials want more convenience in the workday

Millennials are increasingly setting up shop at home or in shared workspaces. The conference room meeting now extends far beyond the office walls.

millennials would like more opportunities to work remotely. They're not used to the typical nine-to-five.

of millennials wish they could work at times they choose, because flexibility leads to better work-life balance.

of workers are equally or more productive working from home. Fewer distractions make it easier to get work done.

Millennials want to save time with technology

Millennials are used to getting things instantly at the tap of a button, and they're taking that approach to meetings. They're searching for new technologies to speed things up.

millennials rate virtual sharing as important for remote collaboration – compared to 2 out of 3 for non-millennials.

of millennials believe that AI leads to more productivity. Automating routine tasks – like taking notes – gives them more time back.

agree that better communication technology could even make in-person communication obsolete in the future.

Give millennials the meetings they want

To prepare for the future of collaboration, you need to empower your millennial workforce. GoToMeeting delivers on the features and flexibility they're looking for.

Powerful mobile apps
Collaborate from anywhere in the same high-quality experience as our desktop apps.

Automatic transcripts
Let our Smart Meeting Assistant take notes for you that are simple to search and share.

Business messaging
Send instant messages to internal and external contacts and seamlessly transition into a meeting.

Clear video conferencing
Talk face to face with up to 25 people on webcam while you share your screen.

Seamless integrations
Start meetings instantly from apps like Slack or with simple voice commands through Amazon Alexa.

Millennials are rethinking business as usual and changing the way we work together – for the better.

Ready to give your growing workforce the kind of meetings they want? Sign up for GoToMeeting today.

Try GoToMeeting Today

Gartner

We were named a
2018 Gartner Meeting Solutions
Magic Quadrant Leader!

Source:
1. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
2. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
3. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
4. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
5. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
6. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
7. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
8. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
9. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>
10. <http://www.pewresearch.org/factbook/2018/04/04/millennials/>