

Michigan State University College of Law
presents

FACES FROM AN AMERICAN DREAM

a collection of photographs by Martin Desht

Martin Desht's photographs poignantly depict the shifting landscape of the cities of America's industrial heartland as their citizens try to adjust to a post-industrial economic mix of service and information employment, unemployment and community redefinition ... "For old industrial towns, many had to discover a new reason for being," says Desht.

Formal Opening
October 8, 2009

4th Floor Atrium of Law College Building, 4 p.m.

Comments at 4:30 p.m.

This exhibition is the kick-off event of an MSU campus-wide, in depth discussion of "Economic Justice" (broadly conceived). Other related events can be found at economicjustice.msu.edu

Sponsored by

MSU College of Law, MSU College of Law Diversity Services Office, James Madison College, Labor and Industrial Relations, Our Daily Work/Our Daily Lives, Peace and Justice Studies, and The Center for Professional and Personal Ethics at Central Michigan University

For additional information contact:

Nicholas Mercurio

Michigan State University College of Law
mercuro@law.msu.edu

John P. Beck

School of Labor and Industrial Relations
beckj@msu.edu

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY
COLLEGE OF LAW