

MIRACLE Center

A NIH Maternal Health Research Center of Excellence

Community Partnership Component

THE PROBLEM IN MICHIGAN

- 70 pregnant women die every year in Michigan, on average.
- Over half of these deaths are preventable.
- Serious pregnancy problems affect 1 in 50 perinatal women. These include bleeding, high blood pressure, and infection.
- The burden is carried disproportionately across populations.

Data from MDHHS: Maternal Deaths in Michigan, 2016-2020 Data Update and SMM MI, 2019

The Community Partnership Component (CPC) is a group of people from different communities that support the Center's work. Members have a wide range of identities and experiences and are full partners in the Center.

Examples of Members

Community, local, state, and national organizations

Perinatal women and their families

Community members

Trusted community-based organizations

Government, policy, and quality improvement partners

OUR PLAN OF ACTION

Create and maintain strong relationships with partners.

Involve partners in all parts of the Center's research process.

Find new partners.

Make sure the Center's research is useful and meets community needs.

Decide what, when, how, and to whom the Center shares research findings.

Support partners that want to use Center findings.

Ensure as many people as possible learn about chosen findings from the Center.

Use findings to make long-term change at the local, state, and national levels.

COMMUNITY BASED PARTICIPATORY RESEARCH GUIDES THE CPC.

Because of this, the group makes sure to:

Support strong leadership.

Build a shared end goal.

List roles and responsibilities of partners.

Include members from different communities and identities.

Use communication that is clear, appropriate, and timely.

Identify clear expectations that all partners agree with.

Use cooperation, co-learning, co-ownership in all work.
