EXCEPTION TO RULES AND REGULATIONS

Exception to MPL's currently effective F.E.R.C. No. 157 Item 50, applying to Item 240 herein:

PRORATION OF PIPELINE CAPACITY

For purposes of movements applying to rates specified in Item 240 herein, the following rule will apply in conjunction with Item 50 in MPL's currently effective F.E.R.C. No. 157:

When a Shipper nominates a shipment for joint movements under this tariff pursuant to Item 45 in MPL's currently effective F.E.R.C. No. 157, MPL will verify the nomination with P66. During the verification it will be determined whether the nomination may be accepted as requested or whether the nomination must be modified in accordance with MPL's and P66's proration policies. Once the nomination has been accepted, whether modified or not, MPL will then notify the Shipper of the adjusted nominated volume. The Shipper then has the option to confirm the scheduling of the adjusted nomination, modified or not, or to withdraw the scheduling of the nomination.

It is necessary for MPL and P66 to prorate their respective portions of the joint movement using different policies because of the unique operations of the connected systems. However, the verification process between MPL and P66 allows the nominated volume to be applied against each pipeline's proration policy, if necessary at the time of [W] sShipment, resulting in a final adjusted nominated volume, if necessary, that will be accepted at the Origin through the interchange point. Once the nomination is accepted by both MPL and P66 and confirmed with the Shipper, the Shipper is assured that no differences in proration policy will interfere with transportation of Petroleum Products once the nomination is accepted for transportation at the Origin.

For a more detailed explanation of each proration policy, please refer to MPL's general proration policy in MPL's currently effective F.E.R.C. No. 157, Item 50 and P66's general proration policy in P66's Shipper Manual, dated January 1, 1999.
