Planting the Seeds OF KINDNESS

The Project We Care (PWC) network is a corporate social responsibility (CSR) initiative that provides platforms for organisations to support underprivileged communities. Led by private sector Chief Executive Officers (CEOs), Business Leaders and the People's Association (PA), this network rallies employees to contribute towards meaningful causes.

Over the years, the PWC network has grown tremendously from 40 companies in 2012 to more than 400 companies today. Through their partnership with PA, the network engages in over 600 social impact initiatives, benefitting more than 900,000 beneficiaries in the past 12 years!

When companies care for the community, their employees feel more empowered as they get to contribute to causes that matter. On this, Mr Tan Jun Yih, Chief Operating Officer of Sea Group, shared his experience: “Taking part in the ‘Jalan with Your Buddy’ programme was a meaningful experience. It is more than a shopping trip—by guiding the beneficiaries in making healthier choices through Health Talks, as well as sharing tips on budgeting, we help them cope with the rising cost of living. Beyond that, we also listen to stories about their families, thereby enriching the human experience for both corporate volunteers and beneficiaries.”

As for CEOs and Business Leaders who are thinking of making volunteerism a part of their company culture, here’s what Ms Wee Wei Ling, PBM, Chairperson of PWC, has to say: “I strongly believe that investing in the community through doing good reaps dividends, not just for society, but for businesses too. Project We Care can support your company in your corporate social responsibility journey. I warmly welcome all corporate organisations to partner with PA to build an inclusive and compassionate society!”

MENTAL HEALTH

Benefits of the Outdoors

Do you ever find yourself feeling calmer after spending time in nature? A simple outdoor activity can improve your mood, sharpen your focus, and reduce stress. So, what are you waiting for? It's time to take charge of your mental health!

Cultivate a Healthy Body for a Healthy Mind

Having a sedentary lifestyle can lead to many physical ailments such as heart disease, high cholesterol and chronic pain. But did you know that a sedentary lifestyle can also affect your mental health? Research suggests that adults with low levels of physical activity experience an increased risk of developing depression.

When you exercise, your body releases endorphins—hormones that lower stress and improve mood. These hormones help your body combat stress, improving your mental health. What's more, you can supercharge these benefits by going outdoors! Your heart and brain will thank you later.

Make Connections All Around You

With the advancement of technology, our connection with nature is gradually fading. For numerous individuals in Singapore, their outdoor time is confined to commuting to school or work. This not only affects their mental well-being, but also diminishes their opportunities to meet new people and engage with the people in their community.

One of the ways to reconnect with nature is to take a moment to notice the beauty that surrounds us. Engage your senses as you step outside. You may even cultivate a new interest such as bird watching or picnicking!

Manage Your Screen-Related Stress

From day to day, we experience a bombardment of information from websites, social media and news outlets. To make matters worse, more and more sources are engaging in tactics designed to evoke negative feelings such as anger and sadness. Frequent use of social media can also lead to the development of symptoms associated with depression and anxiety in individuals.

Fret not—there are ways for you to reduce the mental fatigue caused by this digital overload. Taking regular breaks from social media is a good start. Fill the time that you would have spent scrolling through social media with classes and outdoor activities, such as sports and gardening!

PAssion Tip

Sign up for outdoor courses and activities at our CCs or PAssion Wave outlets today!

CHARITY AND SUSTAINABILITY

Begin at Home

Did you know that Singapore only has one landfill? Located at Pulau Semakau, our only landfill supports the waste disposal of our entire population. We must all do our part to ensure that this area will not be completely filled in the next few years!

As families grow and go through the various stages of life, their living spaces evolve to accommodate their lifestyle needs. For many, these changes also lead to the accumulation of items that are still useable, but are no longer needed, such as clothes and books. Many schools accept donations such as school uniforms from their students. But what can you do with all of your other unwanted belongings? Here are some of the ways that you can share, reuse, repair and recycle existing materials and products while you prepare your home for the next chapter of your life. Who knows, you may make new friends along the way as you bond over similar interests while doing your part for the environment!

Repair Items with Minor Defects

Many items are discarded prematurely due to minor defects that can be easily repaired. For such items, consider attempting to fix them before considering disposal. By doing so, you can extend the lifespan of these items and reduce the resources required to manufacture them. Organisations such as Repair Kopitiam host repair gatherings where you can seek advice from mentors on how to repair your belongings.

REPAIR KOPITIAM

On the last Sunday of every month, Repair Kopitiam invites Singaporeans from all walks of life to give their broken appliances a second chance. These gatherings do more than just teach participants how to repair their belongings—they encourage them to imagine a sustainable future beyond today's buy-and-throw-away culture. With a common goal of preserving the environment, a community of volunteers and coaches was since formed to conduct handyman courses for those with a keen interest to learn how to fix things.

Find New Homes for Your Belongings

While repairing items with minor defects is a great way to practise sustainability, some items may no longer have a place in your life, regardless of the condition they are in. You can start by identifying items that you no longer wish to hang onto and sorting them into categories based on their condition. This will also give you the opportunity to reflect on your buying habits so that you can consume more intentionally in the future! Items that are in good condition can be sold, exchanged or donated to charity. Here are two ways that you can pass on your used clothes and books.

CLOTHES SWAPS AND THRIFTING BOUTIQUES

By swapping your unwanted clothes that are still in great condition with pre-loved items from others, you lengthen the lifespan of these clothes and keep them out of the landfill. All you need for a start is to sign up for a membership with local clothes swap boutiques such as The Fashion Pulpit. So, what are you waiting for? Get access to your sustainable wardrobe today!

GROUND-UP LIBRARIES

Do you ever wish that your neighbourhood library operated 24 hours a day? All over Singapore, residents are setting up ground-up libraries in their residential estates, such as HV Little Library at Holland Avenue. Not only are these spaces open to the public, they are also open, rain or shine! Come down to one of these libraries to leave your pre-loved books for others to enjoy or look for a book that you've been meaning to read. However, as space may be limited on the shelves of these libraries, do enquire beforehand if they are currently accepting donations and, if so, what condition they should be in.

While these are fantastic options to decrease the amount of waste in our landfill, it is important to remember that these activities also generate some form of waste. For example, packing materials such as plastic bags and cardboard boxes may be used to transport materials to a collection site, so remember to use reusable carriers where possible. It is also important to only donate items that are in good condition, as it would otherwise place the burden on volunteers to recycle or dispose of these items. Ultimately, the best thing that we can do to live more sustainably is simply to buy less and buy only things that we need.

EMBRACING THE MINDSET of a Beginner

A person with the 'beginner's mind' does not stay stuck in their existing knowledge and experiences. Rather, they approach situations with curiosity, openness and humility, as if they were learning something for the first time. Here are some of the benefits of adopting this mindset!

IMPROVED SELF-ESTEEM

Mistakes and setbacks are part and parcel of life. What defines a person's character and resilience is how they reflect on such roadblocks and strive to avoid them in the future. When you adopt a beginner's mindset, you free yourself from the expectation that you must be a master of a skill or a topic. View mistakes as learning opportunities and failure as feedback. Over time, you will learn how to cope with making mistakes, take accountability for these mistakes, and trust that you are capable of fixing them.

OPPORTUNITIES TO MAKE CONNECTIONS

As a beginner, it's not necessary to have all the answers. As such, being a beginner means listening to others and approaching diverse opinions with curiosity rather than judgement. A great way to cultivate this mindset is by connecting with people of similar skill level. Consider joining a beginner's interest group which not only provides valuable opportunities to learn from others, but also enhances your communication skills!

EXPANDING CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

As the world changes rapidly, we need to stay flexible to seize career opportunities beyond our scope of opportunities. For example, the surge in demand for computer skills such as programming and data analytics over the past few years exemplifies the need for individuals to continuously expand their skill sets to remain competitive in the job market. Stay attuned to emerging trends by consistently acquiring new competencies. When you do not let the fear of taking risks stop you from trying something new, you can open doors to more professional opportunities!

AGEING ACTIVELY

Learning something new can be a daunting experience, especially when we grow older and become set in our ways. However, embracing the challenge of learning new skills can lead to a myriad of benefits for active ageing. Engaging in continuous learning not only keeps the mind sharp and active, but also fosters a sense of accomplishment and fulfilment. In fact, studies have shown that acquiring new knowledge and skills can have a positive impact on mental health and memory function in older adults. Furthermore, seniors may also enjoy the opportunities to connect with like-minded individuals and foster new friendships!
