INTRODUCTION

Since the dawn of time, near and far, men and women have indulged in 'social drinks'. Every individual has his (or her) poison of choice, which more often than not entails something more intriguing than mere water. Whether it is judicious that mankind should continue to indulge in such extravagances, or whether it would be wiser to abstain from all pleasures of this nature, it is not our place to judge. We leave that decision to the moral philosopher and to you, our valued guests.

No excellent drinks can be made out of anything less than excellent ingredients and we dare to say that whatever may be prepared by our bar staff will speak volumes for itself.

We pride ourselves in using only premium ingredients for your concoctions. Therefore, our fresh juices, syrups and infusions are lovingly made with passion and unbeatable attention to detail. We travel both locally and far to bring you the best and freshest fruits and herbs, because nothing less will satisfy our obsession with delivering the ultimate drinking experience to you.

Ice, also known as a bartender's gold, is a minute but critical detail in any perfect drinks. Hence, we use only distilled and triple filtered water for our ice cubes and our bartenders chip and carve each ice block by hands to provide an unbeatable experience.

Sip, imbibe, enjoy, lean back, relax, bring friends and come again.

Sincerely,

Your Jing Team

PUNCH

The delicious beverage, which, if compounded in a proper manner, is not so intoxicating as it has the character of being, is a composition of sugar, lemon, water and spirit or spirits, with the addition of some aromatic or cordial, wine being sometimes substituted for the Chinese Bai Jiu. There is no precise rules for making punch, not two persons agreeing in the exact proportions of the ingredients. The great secret is that the mixture should be so happily compounded that nothing predominates.

GIN

Gin is the quintessential cocktail liquor and the original inspiration for many classical cocktails, from the Martinis and the Negroni Fizzes, Rickeys and Collins. Historically infamous, gin has swung between extremes, from London gin houses and bathtub gins of Prohibition to being the darling of the golden age of cocktails, used in glamorous libations ritualised by the literary set and Hollywood.

VODKA

A word meaning "little water" in Russian it certainly characterises this clean and most neutral of all spirits.

As opposed to other clear spirits, vodka's main objective is to have as clean a spirit as possible, without any discernible flavour or aroma. Even though Russia is most famous for vodka, the origin of vodka is from the Netherlands.

RUM

Rum is literally and figuratively, the spirit of the Island, with a sweet complexity characteristic of this sugarcane based liquor. Christopher Columbus introduced sugarcane to the Caribbean in 1493, having gathered a few samples in the canary Islands during his travels.

The local islanders soon found a quasi-medicinal use for the fermented cane juice, as did the Brazilians a bit later. Columbus also brought sugarcane to Cuba, where the fermented juice was regarded as a medicinal cure for the flu, chills, home-sickness, and love. Early distillation of rum can also be traced to Brazil, where as far back as the early 1500s, the Portuguese settlers were making "sugarcane syrup wine", or cachaca, discovering that they could distill a spirit from the molasses sitting in the sugar factories, naturally fermenting from the heat.

TEQUILA

Tequila was first produced in the 16th century near the location of the city of Tequila, which was not officially established until 1666.

The Aztec people had previously made a fermented beverage from the agave plant, long before the Spanish arrived in 1521. When the Spanish conquistadors ran out of their own brandy, they began to distill agave to produce one of North America's first indigenous distilled spirits. Around 80 years, around 1600, Don Pedro Sanchez de Tagle, the Marquis of Altamira, began mass-producing tequila at the first factory in the territory of modern-day Jalisco.

By 1608, the colonial governor of Nueva Galicia had begun to tax his products. Spain's King Carlos IV granted the Cuervo family the first license to commercially make tequila.

MEZCAL

Most famously from the Oaxaca region but produced all over Mexico, mezcal is a spirit made from agave;
specifically the heart of the plant, called the piña.

The word “mezcal” itself comes from mexcalli,
which means “oven-cooked agave” in Nahuatl,
an Uto-Aztec language spoken in parts of Mexico.

Myth tells that a bolt of lightning once struck the heart of an agave plant, scorching the piña and converting its sugars into mezcal, fondly called “the elixir of the gods”.

Today mezcal is made almost exactly as it always has been – by cooking agaves in earthen pits over smoldering stones and fibres before distillation, resulting in the spirit’s signature complex, often smoky flavours.

Thanks to tradition, age-old production methods and reliance on the forces of nature and the land, it is seen as a truly craft spirit, almost always handmade in small batches.

Since one agave plant takes 8-30 years to cultivate and mature, there’s no rushing the process – and so,
making mezcal is a labor of love, passed down from generation to generation, always with a maestro mezcalero (mezcal master) behind each expression.

WHISK(E)Y

Conjuring images of rolling green hills, Irish mist, Scottish peat bogs, and the Kentucky Derby, whiskey has a multifaceted and rich lineage, all infused in a glass of amber liquid imparting its characteristic glowing warmth. The ancient roots of whiskey can be traced back to the Irish Emerald Isles around the 20th century (some even say as far back as the 16th century), where the Celtic people made the first whiskey. Their term for the spirit, "uisge beatha" or "uisce beatha", is Gaelic for "water of life" (the word "whiskey" derives from "uisce", pronounced "ish-kee"). The spelling changes with the region from which it comes. The Irish and American spell it "whiskey", whereas the Scots and Canadians follow the British spelling, omitting the "e". Whiskey is made from a fermented grain mash of corn, rye, oat, wheat, or barley. The type of grain used determines the taste and type of the resulting whiskey. Methods of production vary, from traditional pot stills to more modern column stills, but all are aged in barrels (or casks). The type of wood, size of barrel, and length of time aged are all factors. in its distinctive colour, aroma, and taste.

COGNAC

There is nothing quite like a fine cognac, unparalleled in its superiority and depth. Cognac is the most famous and well-known of the brandies and is the ultimate maxim to which all others aspire. Produced only in the cognac region (north of Bordeaux) in France, cognac must be made from the grapes from vineyards in the Charente-Martitime districts. It is made from a combination of white grape varieties, mainly ugni blanc but also folle blanche and colombard, among others, which produce an acidic white wine perfect for distilling into this smooth aromatic brandy. The cognac region is further subdivided into six areas: Grande Champagne, Petit Champagne, Borderies, Fins Bois, Bons Bois, and Bois Ordinaires. The Significance of these areas with respect to labeling is discussed later in this section.
